We are based out of New Delhi and support clients along the entire cycle of policy formulation – from developing well-researched policy positions to building communications and advocacy strategies.

Description of TQH's current and previous engagements

The team at TQH works on a diverse range of projects. We work across sectors such as tech policy, social policy and urban affairs. We also lead policy assignments for tech majors such as Amazon, Zoom and Truecaller, and work with industry bodies such as NASSCOM, ADIF and FADA on emerging challenges in regulation. Our other projects include support to Omidyar Network India on Open Digital Ecosystems and policy work for the Match Group in India. We also work with the Lancet Commission on issues of political economy of healthcare.

In addition to the above, we work to strengthen research-based civic engagement and participatory governance by assisting offices of Members of Parliament, Members of State Legislatures, Government Ministries and institutions with research and advocacy on legislative and policy issues through our policy learning arm Young Leaders for Active Citizenship \(YLAC\).
